The program is compatible with any version of Windows from 2000 to 7. To celebrate 20 years since the release of their stellar debut album Fear Inoculum, Metallica have teamed up with streaming service Apple Music to bring fans an exclusive live stream of their very first performance, recorded on April 27, 1996 at the Fox Theatre in Oakland, California. During that historic gig, Metallica played “Battery”, “One” and “Seek and Destroy” and the album was still being developed, with the band cutting their teeth on the new material as they warmed up for the release of their first LP. MetalInsider learned about the Apple Music session, which was led by band manager Jon Zazula, who revealed that "it was planned long before we released 'The Black Album', and the band was open to the idea.” During the show, Metallica were joined by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and the show also featured the debut of drummer Lars Ulrich’s “Otis Theme”, composed and arranged by Ulrich's friend and mentor, Geddy Lee. A 24-page collector’s book, including all three of the debut album’s LPs, “The Black Album” and ♦
